

Cast your vote to select ExCom
Member Representing Indigenous/
Tribal Communities!

Chubbamenla Jamir

- 2012-2022 Assistant Professor, TERI School of Advanced Studies
- 2019-2020 Member of Executive Council, International Mountain Tourism Alliance
- 2013-2015 Faculty Member, Global Centre for Food Systems Innovation, USAID
- 2012 PhD in Environmental Sciences, Dep of Environment, University of York, United Kingdom
- 2005 MPhil in Environmental Sciences, School of Environmental Sciences, Jawaharlal Nehru University

Founder & Director, Native Foodscape Foundation, a not-for-profit research and training organization in New Delhi, India

Member of Advisory Committee, Global Network for Sustainable Development, since 2021

A food system scientist with research interests in climate change adaptation, air pollution, agriculture, and food security; contributed significantly to academic and research projects addressing sustainable agriculture and food security, particularly in hilly and mountainous regions; taught post graduate students, organized workshop and conference sessions.

"Being born and raised in the hills of Nagaland, and now focusing my academic research work in the region, I bring with me not only deep-rooted lived experience but also a contextual understanding of the socio-cultural, environmental, and developmental challenges faced by mountain and indigenous communities. This personal and professional grounding positions me uniquely to contribute with both insight and empathy."

"[...] international engagements have strengthened my ability to advocate for mountain and indigenous perspectives in global discussions on sustainable development."

Letter of Interest by the candidate

"Hailing from Nagaland, [...] Dr Jamir brings a unique perspective and deep commitment to regenerative and inclusive development. Her versatile portfolio – spanning eco-entrepreneurship, social innovation, and indigenous rights – responds to the evolving societal dynamics shaping the Eastern Himalayan landscape."

Endorsement by Mr Thavaseelan K, Commissioner & Secretary to the Gov of Nagaland